1 THE GAME IN 30 SECONDS

You play Elias "Echo" Calder, a former hitman blinded by the syndicate that killed his wife, Lena. He hunts them down using only his hearing.

The screen is almost completely black, because that is what Echo sees. The only way to see anything is sound. Every noise — yours or an enemy's — appears as comic-book lettering that briefly lights up the walls around it, then fades back into darkness.

The guards are blind too, but they hear everything. A loud footstep shows you the room, and it also tells them where you are. Every sound is a trade-off between seeing more and being found.

THE GOAL OF A LEVEL

Sneak in, find the objective, defeat the boss, grab the evidence, and escape before the clock runs out.

2 HOW A SOUND BECOMES SIGHT

NOISE

a step, a shot, a door

WORD

comic lettering pops up where it happened

LIGHT

a ripple lights the walls nearby

FADE

the room goes dark again

WORD	WHAT MADE IT	WHAT IT DOES
TAP TAP	Your footsteps	Lights a small circle. Running is louder.
PING!	Your sonar (Q)	Lights the whole room and marks every enemy. They hear it too.
BLAM!	A gunshot	Floods the room with light and wakes the building.
WHAM!	Door slammed at a run	Knocks out the guard behind it.
CREAK...	A guard opening a door	Shows you where an enemy is.
THUD	A heavy enemy's step	Your warning that a big one is close.

3 HOW THE THREE KEYWORDS SHAPE THE GAME

COMIC

SOUND IS DRAWN, NOT JUST HEARD

- Every sound is a comic sound effect (TAP, PING!, BLAM!) and that lettering is your only light.
- Story scenes are comic-book panels with speech bubbles, narration boxes and halftone ink.
- Guards talk in bubbles: "Did anyone else hear that?"

LIGHT

DARKNESS IS YOUR ADVANTAGE

- The dark is Echo's home turf: he hears what the guards can't see.
- Light is the danger. Guards carry flashlights that sweep yellow cones. Step into one and you're spotted.
- "Light" is also the tone: a pulp comic, not a grim war game.

TWIST

THE RULES FLIP MID-LEVEL

- Halfway through, the boss turns the power back on.
- The guards can suddenly see you, and your sound-vision washes out in the glare.
- You've spent the level mastering darkness. Now you have to create it by shooting out the lights.

4 THE TWIST, PANEL BY PANEL

1 DARK

You sneak through blackness, reading the room by sound alone.

2 POWER ON

"Power is back on. No more hiding." The building floods with light.

3 PSSHT! TINK!

You shoot out each lamp. Every bullet you fire also tells the guards where you are.

4 DARK AGAIN

The last lamp dies. The rules are yours again — finish them.

5 ONE MINUTE OF PLAY

LISTEN

PING

STRIKE

VANISH

Hear a guard's footsteps. Ping once to light the room and mark him. Dash across in a blink to take him down silently. Then disappear before the others come to check what they heard.

WASD move · SHIFT run (louder) · O sonar · SPACE dash / strike · CLICK shoot · F knife

6 WHAT WE WILL BUILD

STEP 1 · THE CORE

- + A dark top-down level where sound reveals the walls
- + Blind guards that hunt by hearing, plus sonar and silent strikes
- + 3D headphone audio, so you can tell where every sound came from

STEP 2 · THE THEME

- + Comic lettering for every sound
- + Flashlight guards and the "lights on" twist with shootable lamps
- + Comic-panel story scenes with speech bubbles

7 THE 3-MINUTE DEMO

0:00 · COVER

Comic-issue title card: "ECHO #1: Lights On".

0:10 · THE DARK

Sneaking by sound. Every step reads TAP, and a chain of silent strikes clears the room.

1:10 · THE TWIST

The power comes on, the guards turn around, and the lamps go out one by one: TINK... TINK...

2:10 · CLIFFHANGER

The PA plays Lena's song. Final panel: "She's still humming."

Why it stands out: it turns sound into sight, so a blind hero is fun to play rather than a gimmick. That also makes it a strong showcase for audio-first, accessible design.

"EVERY SOUND IS A PANEL.
EVERY SILENCE IS A KILL."

THE STORY TWIST

All game, Echo finds his way by following Lena's song, the four notes his wife hummed every night. In the final panel, that song plays over the enemy's PA. Someone has been leading him the whole time. The gameplay twist flips the rules; the story twist flips who is hunting whom, and sets up ECHO #2.
